What's inside

Each page is a board from the design canvas, as it stands today. Sections 1 to 6 are the canvas; section 7 is taken from the app, which has moved ahead of the canvas in places. Notes under a page title say where a board is behind.

1 Name and logo
The name, the logotype and how one name works across the app, clothing and books.

2 Colour and type
The palette, the typefaces and how words appear inside the world.

3 Puggle
How she is drawn, what her face can do and what it never does.

4 The cast
Family and friends, and what tells them apart.

5 Icons, stickers and shapes
One drawing style in four finishes: line, sticker, holographic and print.

6 The world
Places from a Sydney family's week, and what they become on a phone, a page and a jumper.

7 In the app now
What the app itself draws today: the cast, the scenes, the weather, and where the logo has got to.

8 Rules
The short list that everything above follows.

Text is always Ink on light colours and Paper or Moon on Night. Brights are fills, not text colours. Each child gets one soft field as their colour.

Text in the world

Signs are real words, blurred and merged into blobs in a colour close to the sign, so they read as part of the scene. Only words the story needs are crisp.

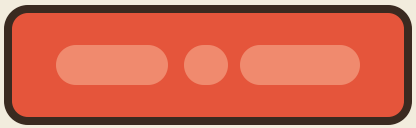

Crisp: reads as text

Soft: still readable

Blob, close colour: the world, not a message

Pills only: pure shape

Section 3

Puggle

How she is drawn, what her face can do and what it never does.

Puggle model sheet

As built in the app, 12 November 2026. About 2½ heads tall

The front view, faces, moves and outfits below are drawn from the app's own file of her parts, so this sheet and the app cannot drift apart. What changed from the sheet before: coloured lines, eyes lower, wider apart and a little smaller, soft oval cheeks, a light blue pocket, webbed feet, markings on her tail, a yellow centre in her clip, and eyebrows that appear only with a feeling.

Line weight: head and dress 7, bill, legs and tail 6, details 4 to 5 (at 240 wide). Cheeks and inside shapes have no line. Dark brown is kept for eyes and nostrils.

NEVER

No mouth

No frowning brows

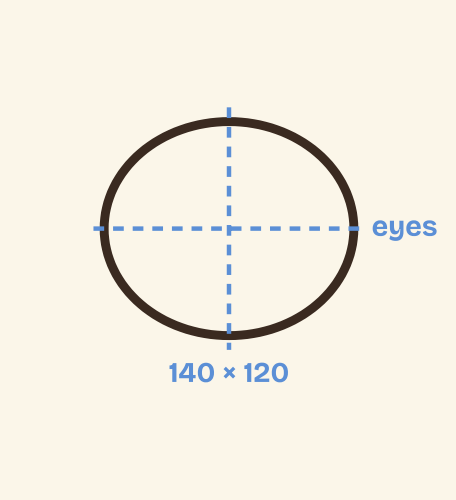

No recolouring

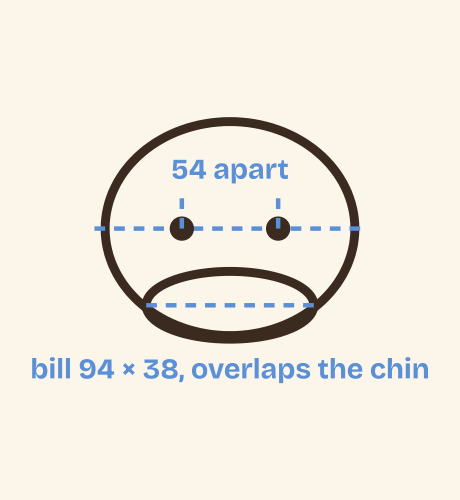

No black line

Eyebrows are off at rest and come in only with a move: raised for delight, soft for content and sleepy. Never angry, sad or worried. Also never: an open or bent bill, hands hidden in silhouette, dark patches on the face.

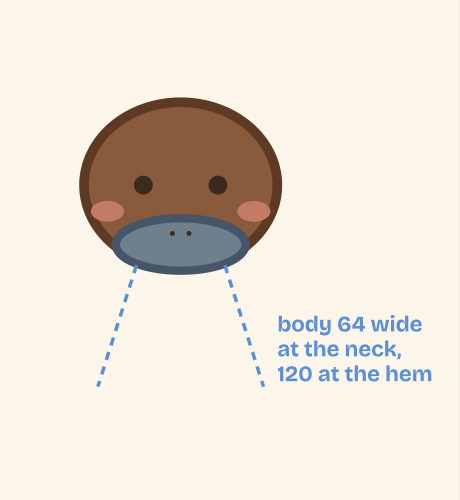

Drawing Puggle by hand

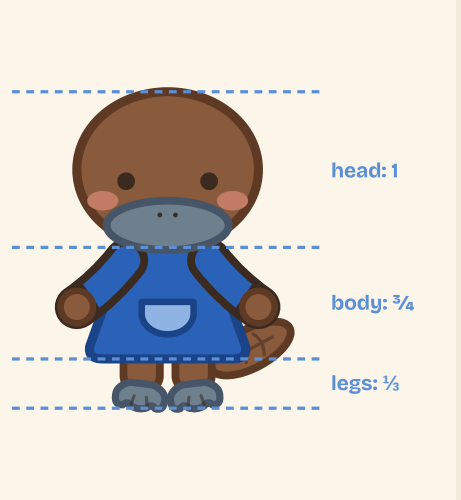

1. Head

2. Eyes and bill

3. Cheeks and body

4. Arms, legs, tail

- Start from two ovals: the head, and the bill overlapping its lower edge.
- Eyes sit on the head's centre line, close above the bill, 54 apart.
- Cheeks sit at the ends of the bill's top edge, half on the head.

- The jumper is the body. Arms join just under the head; legs are short and thick.
- Outline last, in one weight per part; round every corner.

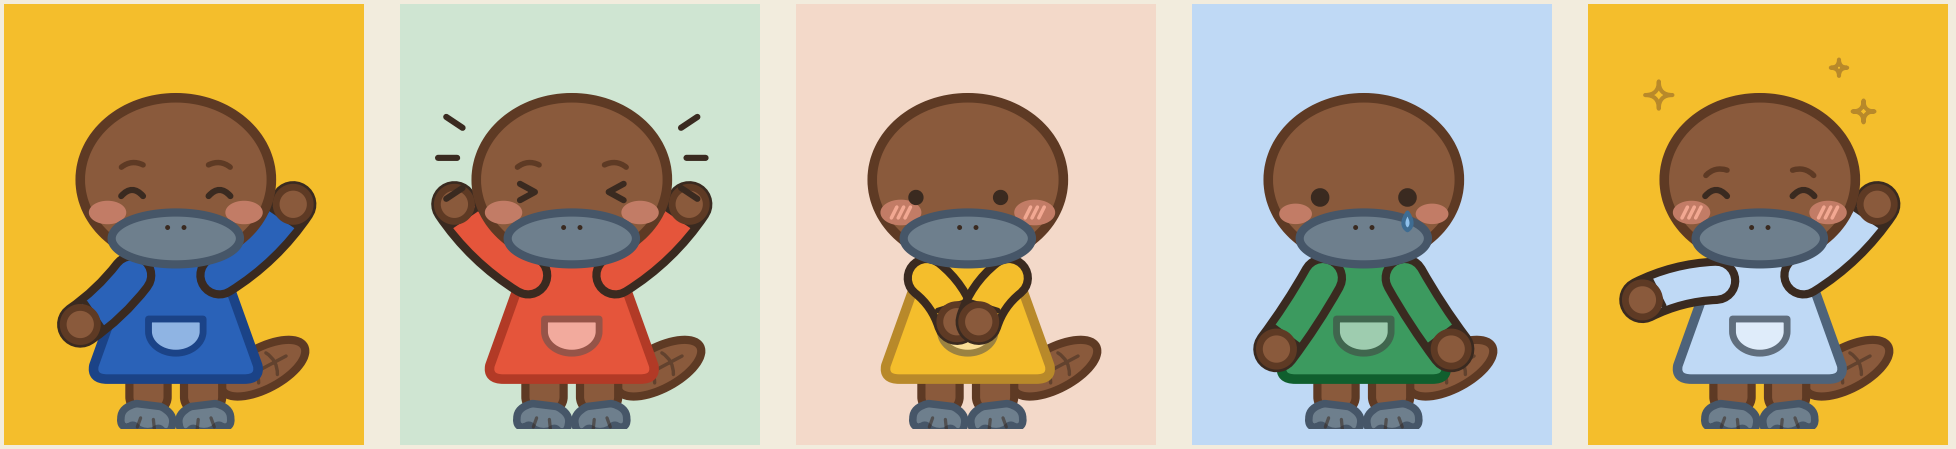

Puggle, expressions and poses

POSES

Hello | Hooray | Shy | Oh no | Ta-da

Hello | Hooray | Shy | Oh no | Ta-da

Silhouette test. Arms keep a thin light outline in silhouette so they never merge with the body. Both hands are always visible. Raised or lowered hands sit clear of the head and body; raised arms go up and out at about 45 degrees, never straight up behind the head. Hands held in front sit on the garment, never over the face or bill.

Hands

A. Fur-brown hands, slate feet

Hands match the body, so they read as paws. Feet stay slate, like webbed platypus feet, tying them to the bill.

B. All fur-brown

Hands and feet both match the body. The calmest; the bill becomes the only slate shape.

C. Light tan hands and feet

A lighter warm tan, like paw pads. Hands stand out against both the fur and the sleeves.

DOING THINGS WITH THEM (SHOWN WITH A)

Peekaboo

For the baby. The only time hands go over the face.

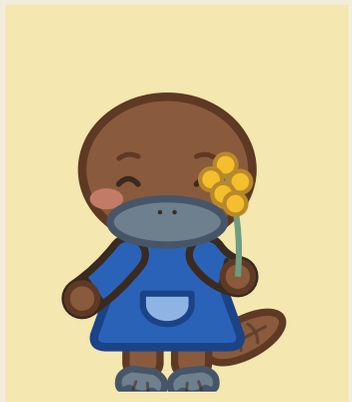

Oh!

Hands to cheeks, for surprise or delight.

Clap

Hands meet in front, with clap marks.

Holding wattle

One hand holds a prop: flowers, a bottle, a toy, Pebble's hand.

Balloon

Birthdays and milestones.

Puggle: three additions

Proposals only. Her face and proportions are unchanged; these add range, they don't redesign her.

1. A patterned outfit

Her dress takes a small print from our motif family. Sleeves stay plain so the arms still read. Each print is a real fabric repeat.

Now

Plain colour.

Quatrefoil

Her own mark, cream on blue.

Gum leaf

Green on mint.

Wattle

Yellow blossom on cream.

At scene size

The print still reads as texture.

2. A flat version

No outline at all: shapes and tones only. Arms and legs are a shade deeper than the dress and fur so they separate. For prints, wallpapers and small sizes.

On colour

Sits on Wattle without a line.

Waving

Poses carry over.

At night

Reads on dark too.

Small sizes

Holds down to icon size, where the outlined version clogs.

3. Walking

A side-on walk in two key poses: the stride, and the passing step with a small bounce. The tail and arms swing against the legs. Enough for books now, and the two keys Rive needs later.

Stride

Legs apart, arms opposite.

Passing

Legs together, body lifts.

In a row

Alternating the two poses makes a parade.

Motion direction

What to settle before opening Rive: when she reacts, how her tail shows feeling, how snappy she is, and a few moves taken from a real toddler.

1. Reaction map

Every moment she responds to, and the rules that keep her kind to tired parents.

WHEN THE PARENT…	PUGGLE…	FOR	NOTE
Opens the app, first time that day	Wave	2 s	Once a day, not on every open.
Saves an everyday log (bottle, nappy, solids)	Nod: one small happy bounce	0.4 s	The save is instant; the bounce plays beside it.
Starts a sleep	Yawn, then falls asleep	3 s, then loops	She stays asleep until the sleep ends.
Ends a sleep	Stretch and wake	1.2 s
Potty success	Proud ta-da, tail up	1.5 s	With the sticker.
Milestone	Full hooray, quatrefoils	1.5 to 1.8 s	The only big one. Rare on purpose.
Pulls to refresh	Walks while you pull	while held
Taps or drags near her	Eyes follow the finger; a tap gets a giggle bounce	0.5 s	She notices you.
Hasn't logged for a while; missed a day	Nothing. She idles as usual		No sad face, no reminders from her. Ever.
Night (about 10 pm to 6 am), or a child asleep	Everything half the size and slower; no jumps		Idle becomes the sleepy loop.
Reduce Motion is on	Still poses that swap		No movement at all.

RULES

Never in the way. Nothing waits for an animation. Saving, navigating and typing are instant; she reacts alongside.

No guilt. She is never sad, worried or disappointed about what a parent did or didn't log. Sad is only for her own stories.

Quiet at night. After dark she is smaller, slower and stays on the ground.

Silent by default. No sound unless switched on. A soft haptic tap when she lands.

One thing at a time. When she moves, the scene behind her goes still.

She notices you. Her eyes follow your finger, and she glances at what you just pressed.

2. The tail shows the feeling

She has no mouth or brows, so the tail is her mood signal, with her eyes. One position per feeling.

Calm
Resting, slightly raised. The default.

Happy
Up and wagging. Small marks show the wag in stills.

Proud
Straight up, like a flag.

Surprised
Stiff and straight out.

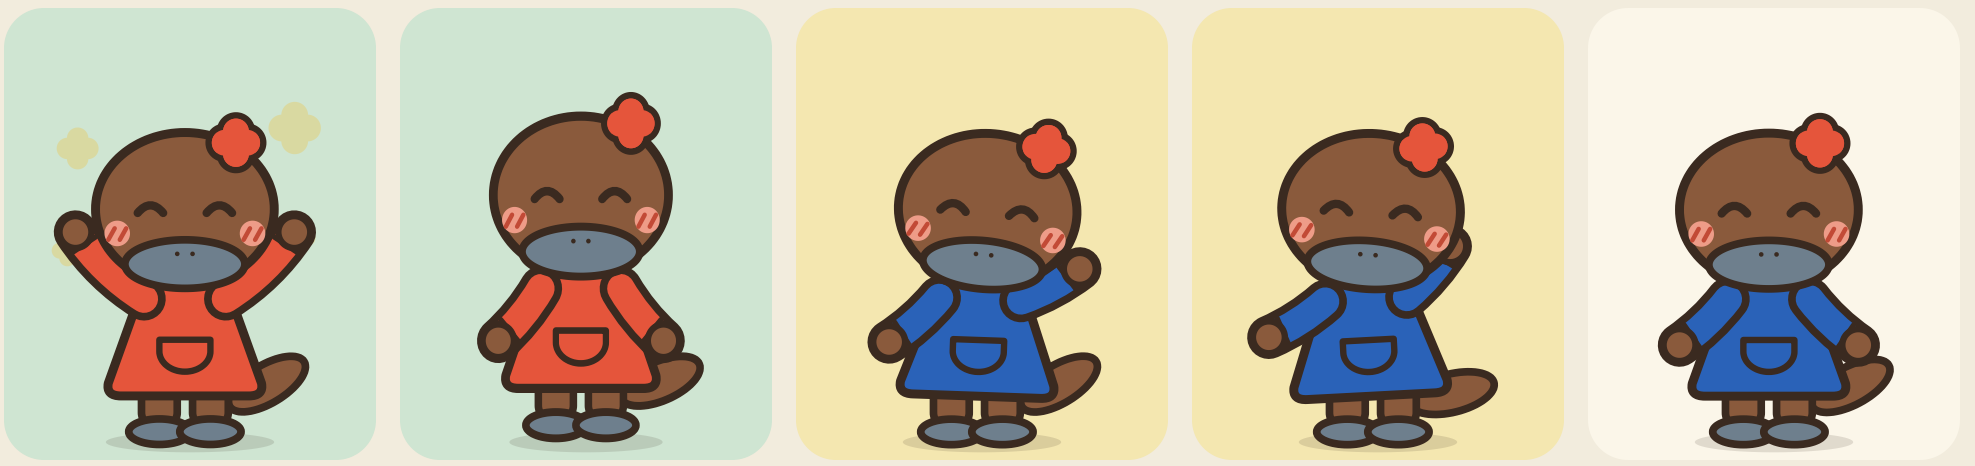

Sad
Droops to the ground. Only for her own feelings, never about the parent.

Shy
Tucked in close, half hidden.

Sleepy
Curled around her feet.

3. Reactions are snappy

Decided: reactions hold each pose and pop to the next; breathing, sleeping and scenes stay smooth. The earlier smooth versions are shown for comparison.

Hooray, smooth (before)
Eased the whole way. Soft, a little floaty.

Hooray, snappy (chosen)
Holds each pose and pops to the next. Arms start down, so the fling reads.

Wave, smooth (before)
Arm swings continuously, and only to cheek height.

Wave, snappy (chosen)
Arm up beside the head, clear of it; three beats.

Nod (new)
The everyday "saved" reaction: dip, pop, settle in 0.4 s.

4. Moves from a real toddler

Key poses in a three-quarter view. Each is one clear silhouette to animate into and hold.

Three-quarter, at rest
Her acting view. The bill and one cheek turn towards us; movement reads more naturally than front-on.

Potty dance
Knees together, hands at the front of her dress, tail stiff. A quick side-to-side jiggle. The app can use it as the gentle "time to try?" reminder.

Flop-sit
Legs shoot out, bottom lands, arms fly up for balance, soles to camera. For finishing something, or giving up happily.

Tippy-toe reach
Up on her toes, one arm stretched, the other out for balance, tail as counterweight, eyes on the prize. For "add" and "not yet" moments.

Section 4

The cast

Family and friends, and what tells them apart.

The friends still have stitched cheeks here; the app's drawings of them are newer.

The cast, to scale

Children share one head size; grown-ups are taller, with longer bodies, not bigger heads

Nan	Mum	Dad	Pop	Puggle	Pebble	Quill	Kip	Digby	Sunny
Platypus	Platypus	Platypus	Platypus	2½, platypus	6 months, platypus	2½, echidna	3, koala	3½, wombat	4, quokka

SMALL VERSIONS

For scenes, widgets and anywhere under about 100 pt tall: plain blush, no nostrils or pocket, line a quarter heavier.

Puggle Pebble Quill Kip Digby Sunny

Puggle and her baby sibling

Puggle, 2½

Big sister. Potty training, moving to a big bed, big feelings.

Baby sibling, 6 months

Bottles, first foods, rolling, teeth. Smaller, with a curl on top and a romper.

Puggle on the potty

Ta-da: the proud pose for a success, with sparkles.

Puggle at bedtime

Sleepy pose in pyjama colours, for the big-bed story.

No hair: head accessories, and Pebble's curl

HEAD ACCESSORIES

Rims only

Light blue lenses

Black lenses

Resting on the bill

Rims only

Light blue lenses

Black lenses

Suggested: Nan in light blue reading glasses low on her bill; Pop in round rims at eye level, with his hat.

- Few and signature: one accessory per character, like Hello Kitty's bow or Paddington's hat.
- Same drawing rules: flat colour, the same outline, from the palette, no extra detail lines.
- Never hide the eyes: they carry every expression. Black lenses only for a sunny-day joke.
- Must read in silhouette and at icon size: glasses as two circles, a hat as one shape.
- Accessories can tell characters apart: Nan's low reading glasses, Pop's hat.

Section 5

Icons, stickers and shapes

One drawing style in four finishes: line, sticker, holographic and print.

The Puggle style

Taken from everything so far: the calm line of system icon sets, the duotone accent from Phosphor, the two-tone fills and sticker energy of the nursery sets, and our own clothing label. What makes it Puggle: chubby, soft shapes, colour by activity from the brand palette, the quatrefoil sparkle, and finishes that carry from the app to stickers and clothing.

WHERE IT SITS

Line
Lucide and most system sets

Duotone
Phosphor: one accent everywhere

Puggle line ★
Colour by activity, from the brand palette, inside the line

Puggle sticker ★
Same drawing, filled, die-cut

Puggle print ★
No outline; the line slips instead

SIX RULES

1. Chubby
Squat, toddler proportions. Wide bodies, short necks, nothing spindly; most icons fill the 20 pt keyshape.

2. Soft
1.4 pt line, round caps and joins, every corner rounded. No sharp points, even on stars.

3. Colour by activity
One brand colour fills one main part, inside the line. Feeding and milestones Wattle, sleep Sky, nappy, potty and bath Mint, play and outings Blush, health Shell. Scans fast on Today.

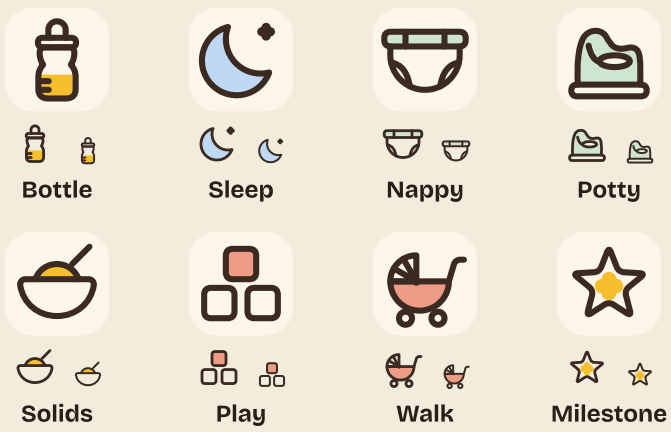

4. Quatrefoil sparkle
Sparkles and highlights use the four-petal shape from Puggle's hair clip, never a plain star.

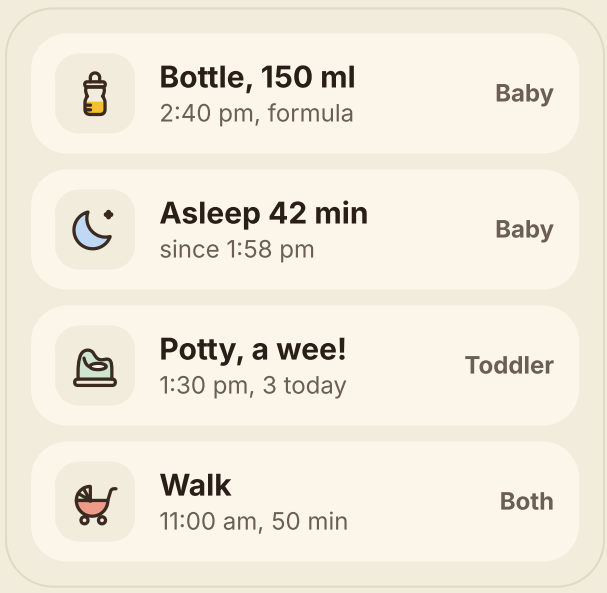

5. No faces in the app
Objects stay objects. Faces and expressions belong to the characters, in stickers, books and print.

6. One drawing, three finishes
Line for the app, sticker for celebrations and widgets, print for clothing and wallpapers. The slipped, off-register line lives only in print.

Feeding, milestones Wattle · Sleep Sky · Nappy, potty, bath Mint · Play, outings Blush · Health, growth Shell

LINE: THE APP (TODAY, LOG SHEET, HISTORY, SF SYMBOLS)

In single-colour places (tinted Home Screen, Lock Screen, menus) the fills drop out and the line stands alone, so every icon must read without it.

STICKER AND PRINT: CELEBRATIONS, WIDGETS, CLOTHING, WALLPAPERS

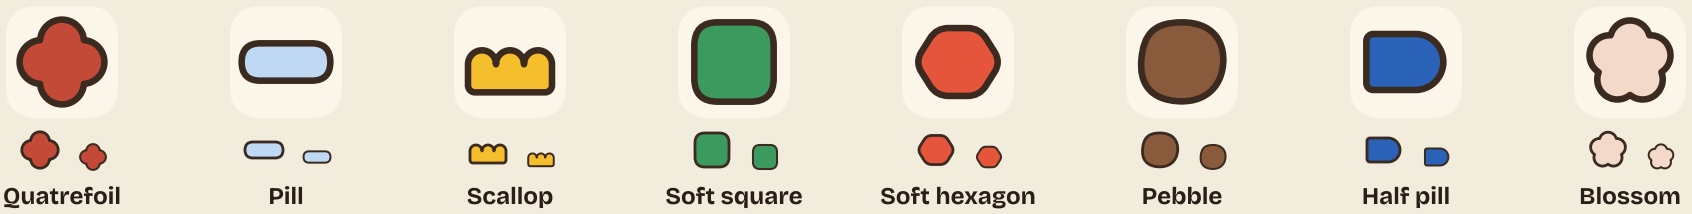

Sticker: the palette fills, a gentle two-tone (the right half a touch deeper), the Wattle sparkle and a paper die-cut edge. Print: flat colour with no outline; the ink line slips up and left instead, which is how a two-screen print really misregisters.

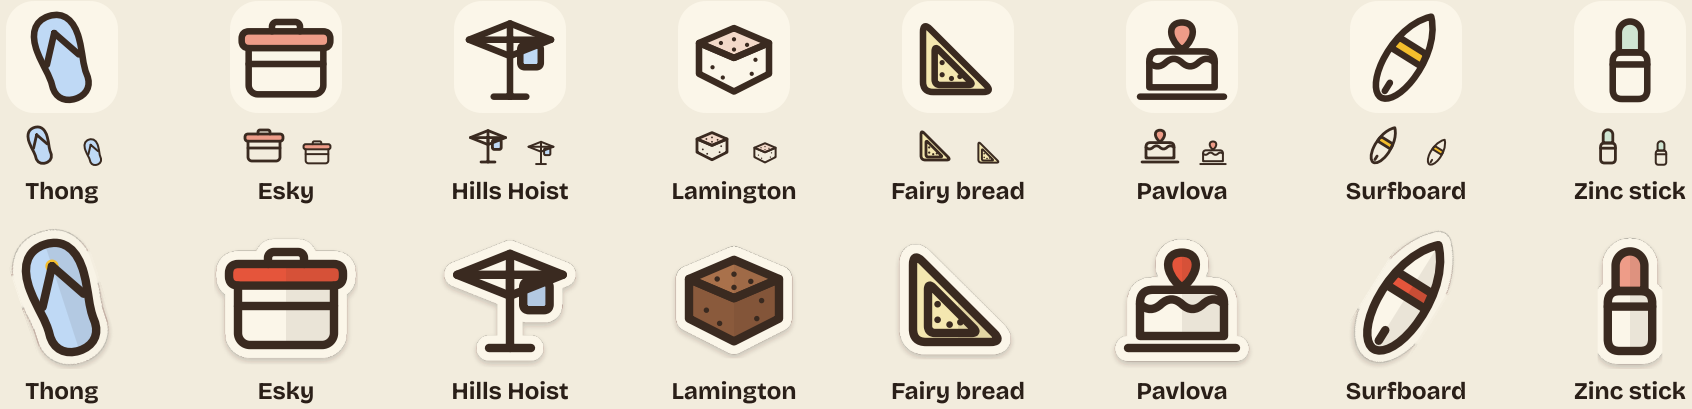

Shapes and Australiana, in the Puggle style

The same rules as the activity icons: 24 pt grid, 1.4 pt line, every corner rounded, brand palette only, one drawing finished three ways. Shapes keep their brand colours; props take the soft palette so they sit with the app icons.

SOFT SHAPES

AUSTRALIANA PROPS

TOGETHER

Left: a sticker sheet (rewards, the potty chart, a printed insert with a Puggle & Co. order). Right: the print finish as a fabric repeat, where the line slips off-register like a real two-screen print.

Thong, esky, Hills Hoist, lamington, fairy bread, pavlova, surfboard and zinc are everyday suburban things, with no Indigenous motifs.

Holographic stickers

The super special ones. Same sticker drawing, but the fill and the die-cut edge are a foil of the brand pastels, with a glare that slides across and quatrefoil glints. On the canvas they shimmer on a loop; on iPhone the shimmer follows how you tilt the phone.

First steps

A milestone: first steps, first word, first tooth.

Dry all week

Potty training: seven dry days in a row.

Puggle's clip

The rarest: a surprise, maybe once a month, for showing up.

On iPhone. Core Motion gives the phone's tilt; it moves the foil gradient and the glare with a SwiftUI Metal shader, so the sticker catches the light like a real one.

Calm by default. With Reduce Motion on, the foil stays still with a soft sheen. No sound, no confetti storm.

Rare on purpose. Only big moments earn one, so they stay special. They live in the sticker book and can be shared as an image.

Section 6

The world

Places from a Sydney family's week, and what they become on a phone, a page and a jumper.

Set pieces and backgrounds

Places from a Sydney family's week, redrawn as pictures: flat shapes, a small colour key, real light, and the cast in the middle of something.

1. No outlines on the world

Places are flat shapes. Only the cast has a line, a darker shade of each colour, so they are always the first thing you see.

2. A colour key

Three or four colours per scene, shown as dots beside each name. Light and shade are tones of those colours.

3. One big shape

Each scene has one shape that owns it: an umbrella, an arch, a roof, a tree. Things overlap and crop at the edges.

4. Real light

Every scene knows where the sun is: a lit side, a shade side and a cast shadow on the ground.

5. A moment

The cast is doing something, in their small versions, about 86 units tall in a 390 × 300 scene.

Beach

A giant striped umbrella and its shadow. Puggle shows off her sandcastle; Pebble stays in the shade.

Bush walk

A big gum frames the right and throws its shadow across the track. Puggle and Quill set off.

Sydney Harbour

The sun sets inside the arch and lays a path on the water. Puggle waves at the ferry with Pop.

Backyard

Morning. The sun over the fence, a magpie singing, Puggle stretching and Pebble already up.

The park

A huge gum with dappled shade. Puggle and Kip in front of the slide and swings.

Rainy day

Heavy cloud, even rain, one big puddle. Puggle jumps in it in her yellow raincoat; Digby keeps his distance.

The pool

Sunlit water with lane ropes and a ring, a shade sail and bunting. Puggle and Sunny on the deck.

Grandma's house

The red roof fills the corner; Nan waits on the verandah as Puggle runs up the path.

The café

One long awning and its shadow. Mum and Puggle, and a babyccino on the table.

The farm

A windmill towers over wheat and paddock. Puggle and Digby meet the sheep.

The shops

Grocer, bakery, florist, told apart by their picture signs. Fruit crates crop the corner; Puggle and Quill do the shopping.

Night street

Bedtime. The moon behind the terraces, each house keeping a whisper of its daytime colour.

KIT OF PARTS

Three scenes for the app

The new approach, on the scenes the app needs first: the Today header in the morning and at night, and a milestone. The world is flat shapes in a three-colour key; only the cast has a line.

Tuesday 10 November

Good morning

Bottle, 150 ml
6:40 am, Bea

Morning

Big shape: the sun and its glow, rising over the neighbours' roofs. Light: paling tops catch the sun, the fence throws a scalloped shadow, sunlight pools on the lawn. Moment: Puggle stretches, Pebble is already up, a magpie sings on the fence.

Tuesday 10 November

Goodnight

since 7:05 pm, Ollie

Bedtime

Big shape: the moon behind the roofs. Light: moonlit roof edges, lit windows, lamplight and her shadow. Moment: goodnight to the moon; the cat watches. The lit doorway has moved off her head.

Ollie walked today
Tap to add a photo

Celebration

Big shape: a giant quatrefoil, Puggle's own mark. Light: soft floor shadows only; the colour does the shouting. Moment: ta-da, with Quill and Kip cheering, in their small versions.

Wallpapers and repeats

Two kinds: scenes that leave the sky clear for the clock, and repeats built from the cast, the gum leaf and the quatrefoil.

Morning

Quiet sky for the clock; the scene sits at the bottom.

Bedtime

The night street, with extra stars up the screen.

Sticker heads

Round badges with coloured rings over a line pattern of gum leaves and quatrefoils.

One-colour line

Line-only Puggle, leaves and quatrefoils. Prints as one screen on fabric.

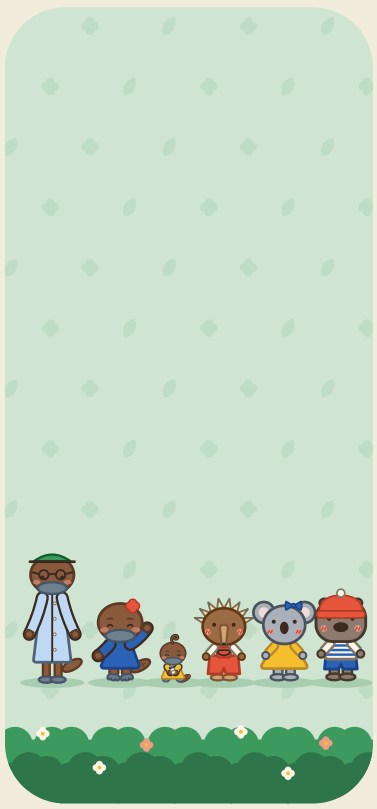

Pebble repeat

One character, brick repeat, a soft shadow under each.

Tone on tone

The activity icons as a quiet pattern in one colour, with the cast in front at full size.

The parade

Everyone in a row along the bottom, a faint motif grid above, bushes and flowers in front.

Night lines

The activity icons as line drawings on night blue, with quatrefoil stars.

WHAT THE REFERENCES TAUGHT US

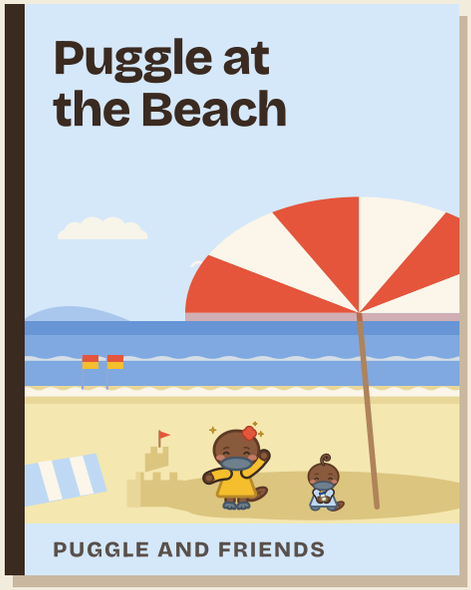

Leave room. The best phone wallpapers are mostly empty: one colour, a small scene or a row of characters at the bottom.

Tone on tone. A pattern in a slightly deeper shade of the background gives richness without noise, and lets the cast stand in front.

One motif family. Ours are the gum leaf, the quatrefoil and the activity icons. They repeat everywhere, like a house pattern.

Line and flat both work. The same drawings as outlines on dark, or as flat shapes on colour.

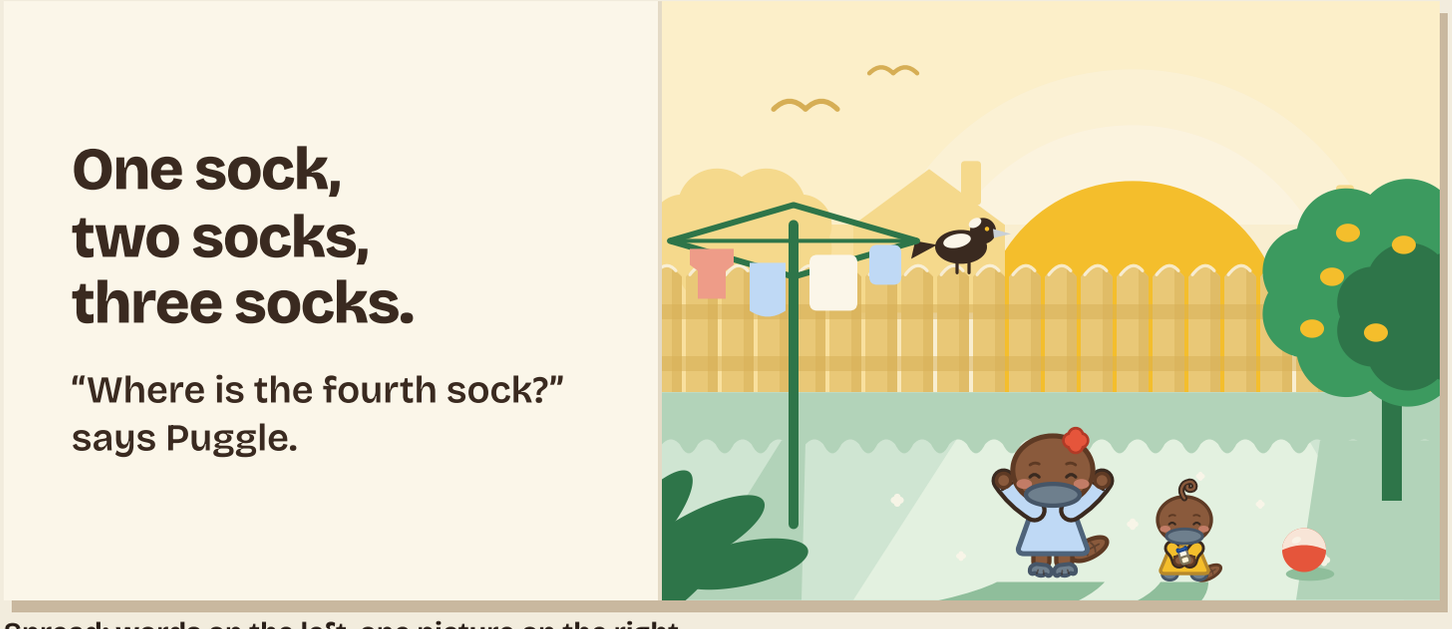

Books

Spread: words on the left, one picture on the right

One scene, one book

Each title lives in one place from the set, so the books and the app share a world.

The cover is the scene

Title in the sky colour of the scene, picture below, series name at the foot, Ink spine.

Few words

One or two short sentences a spread, in Bricolage. The picture carries the story.

Drawn on 10 November. Puggle's face here is the earlier one.

Clothing mock-ups

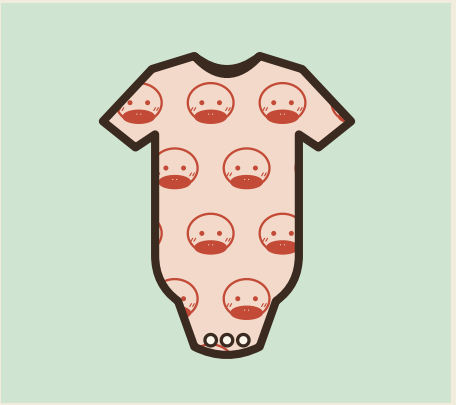

Tee: face and wordmark

Tee: friends repeat

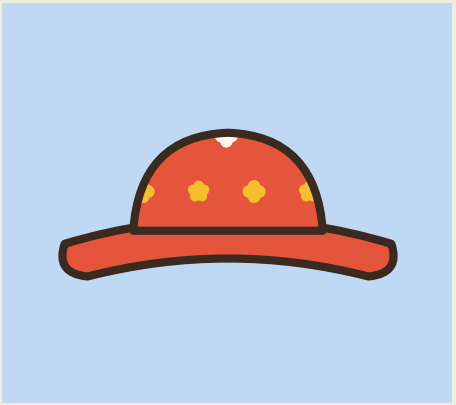

Tee: stripes and tab

Onesie: line-face repeat

Onesie: shapes repeat

Bucket hat: shapes

Beanie: woven tab

In the app now

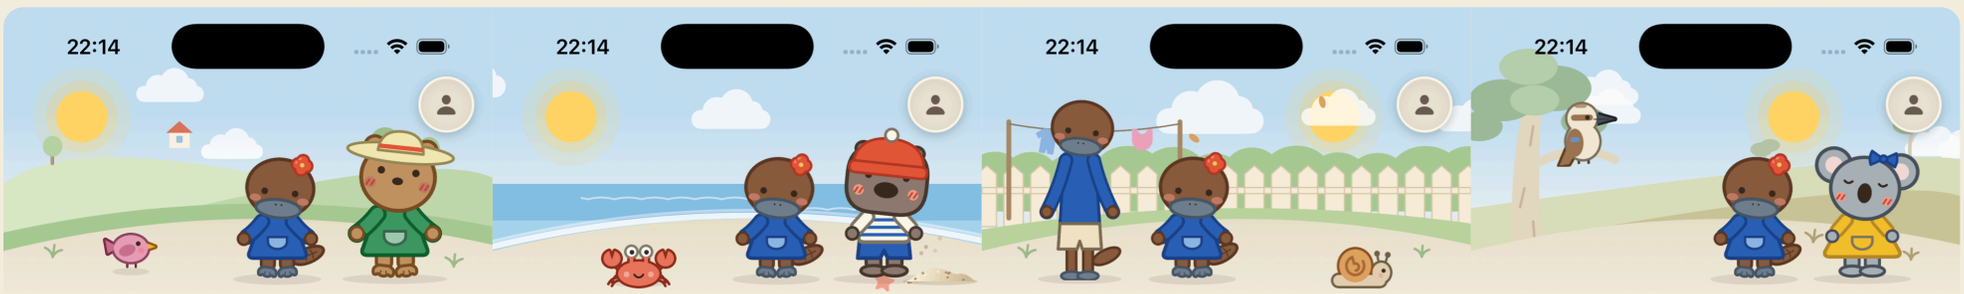

What the app itself draws today. These are pictures saved by the app's own build on 13 and 14 November; the canvas has not caught up with them yet.

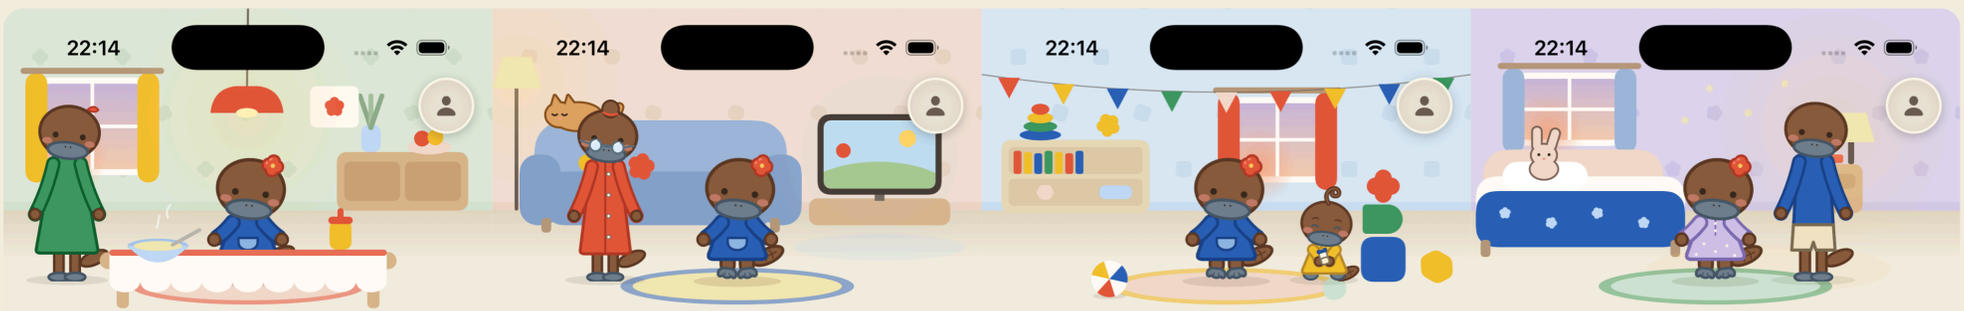

The cast as the app draws them

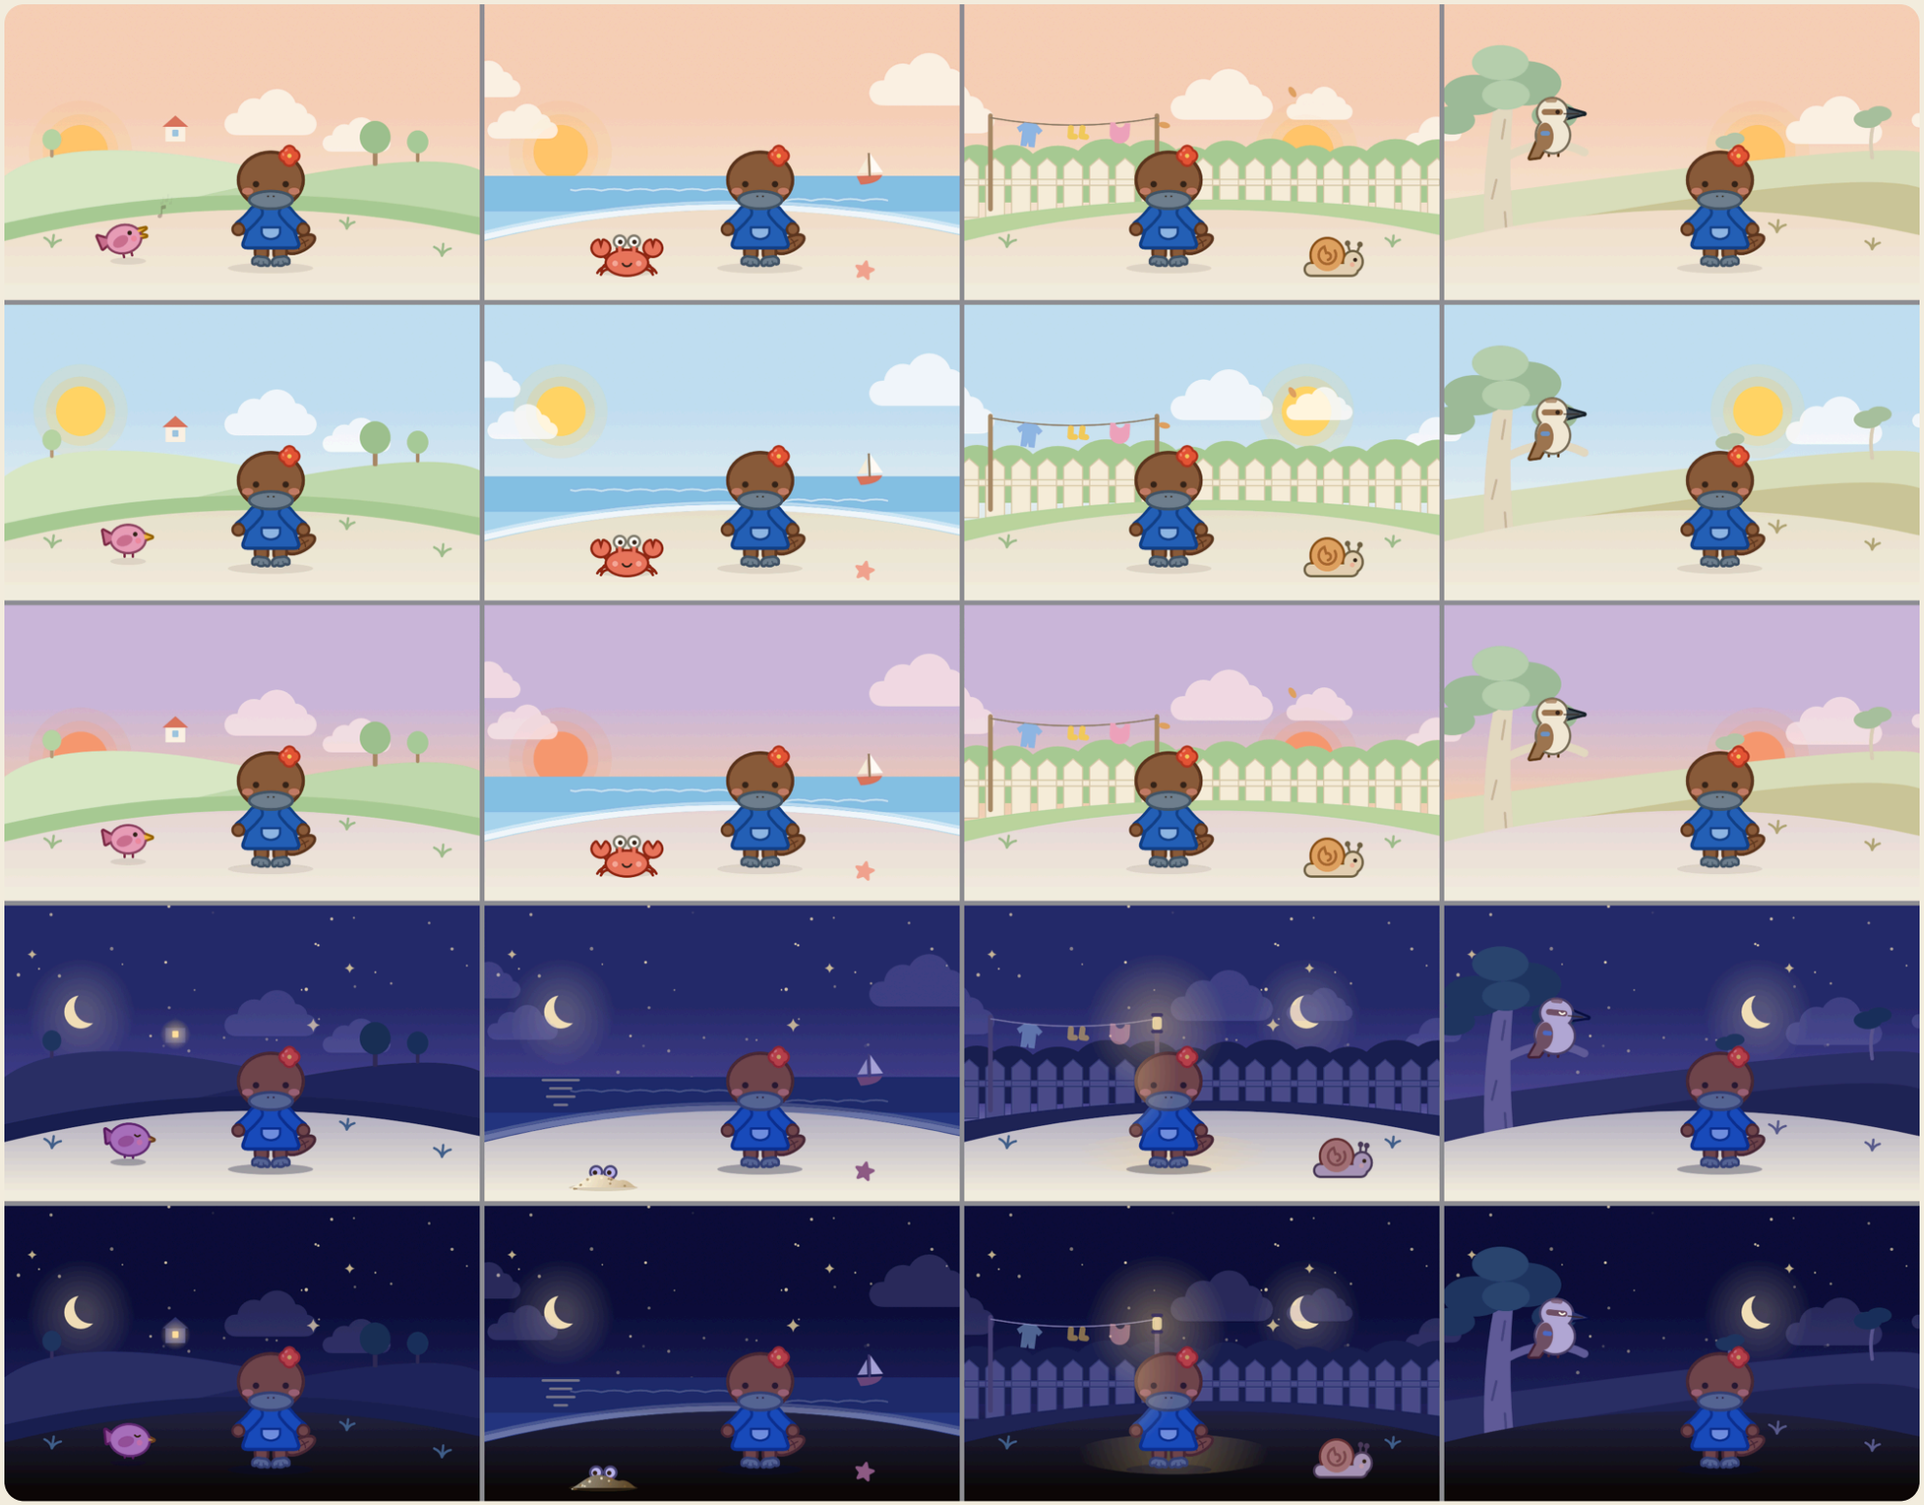

Family and friends, each with their own file of parts, and how they join the scenes.

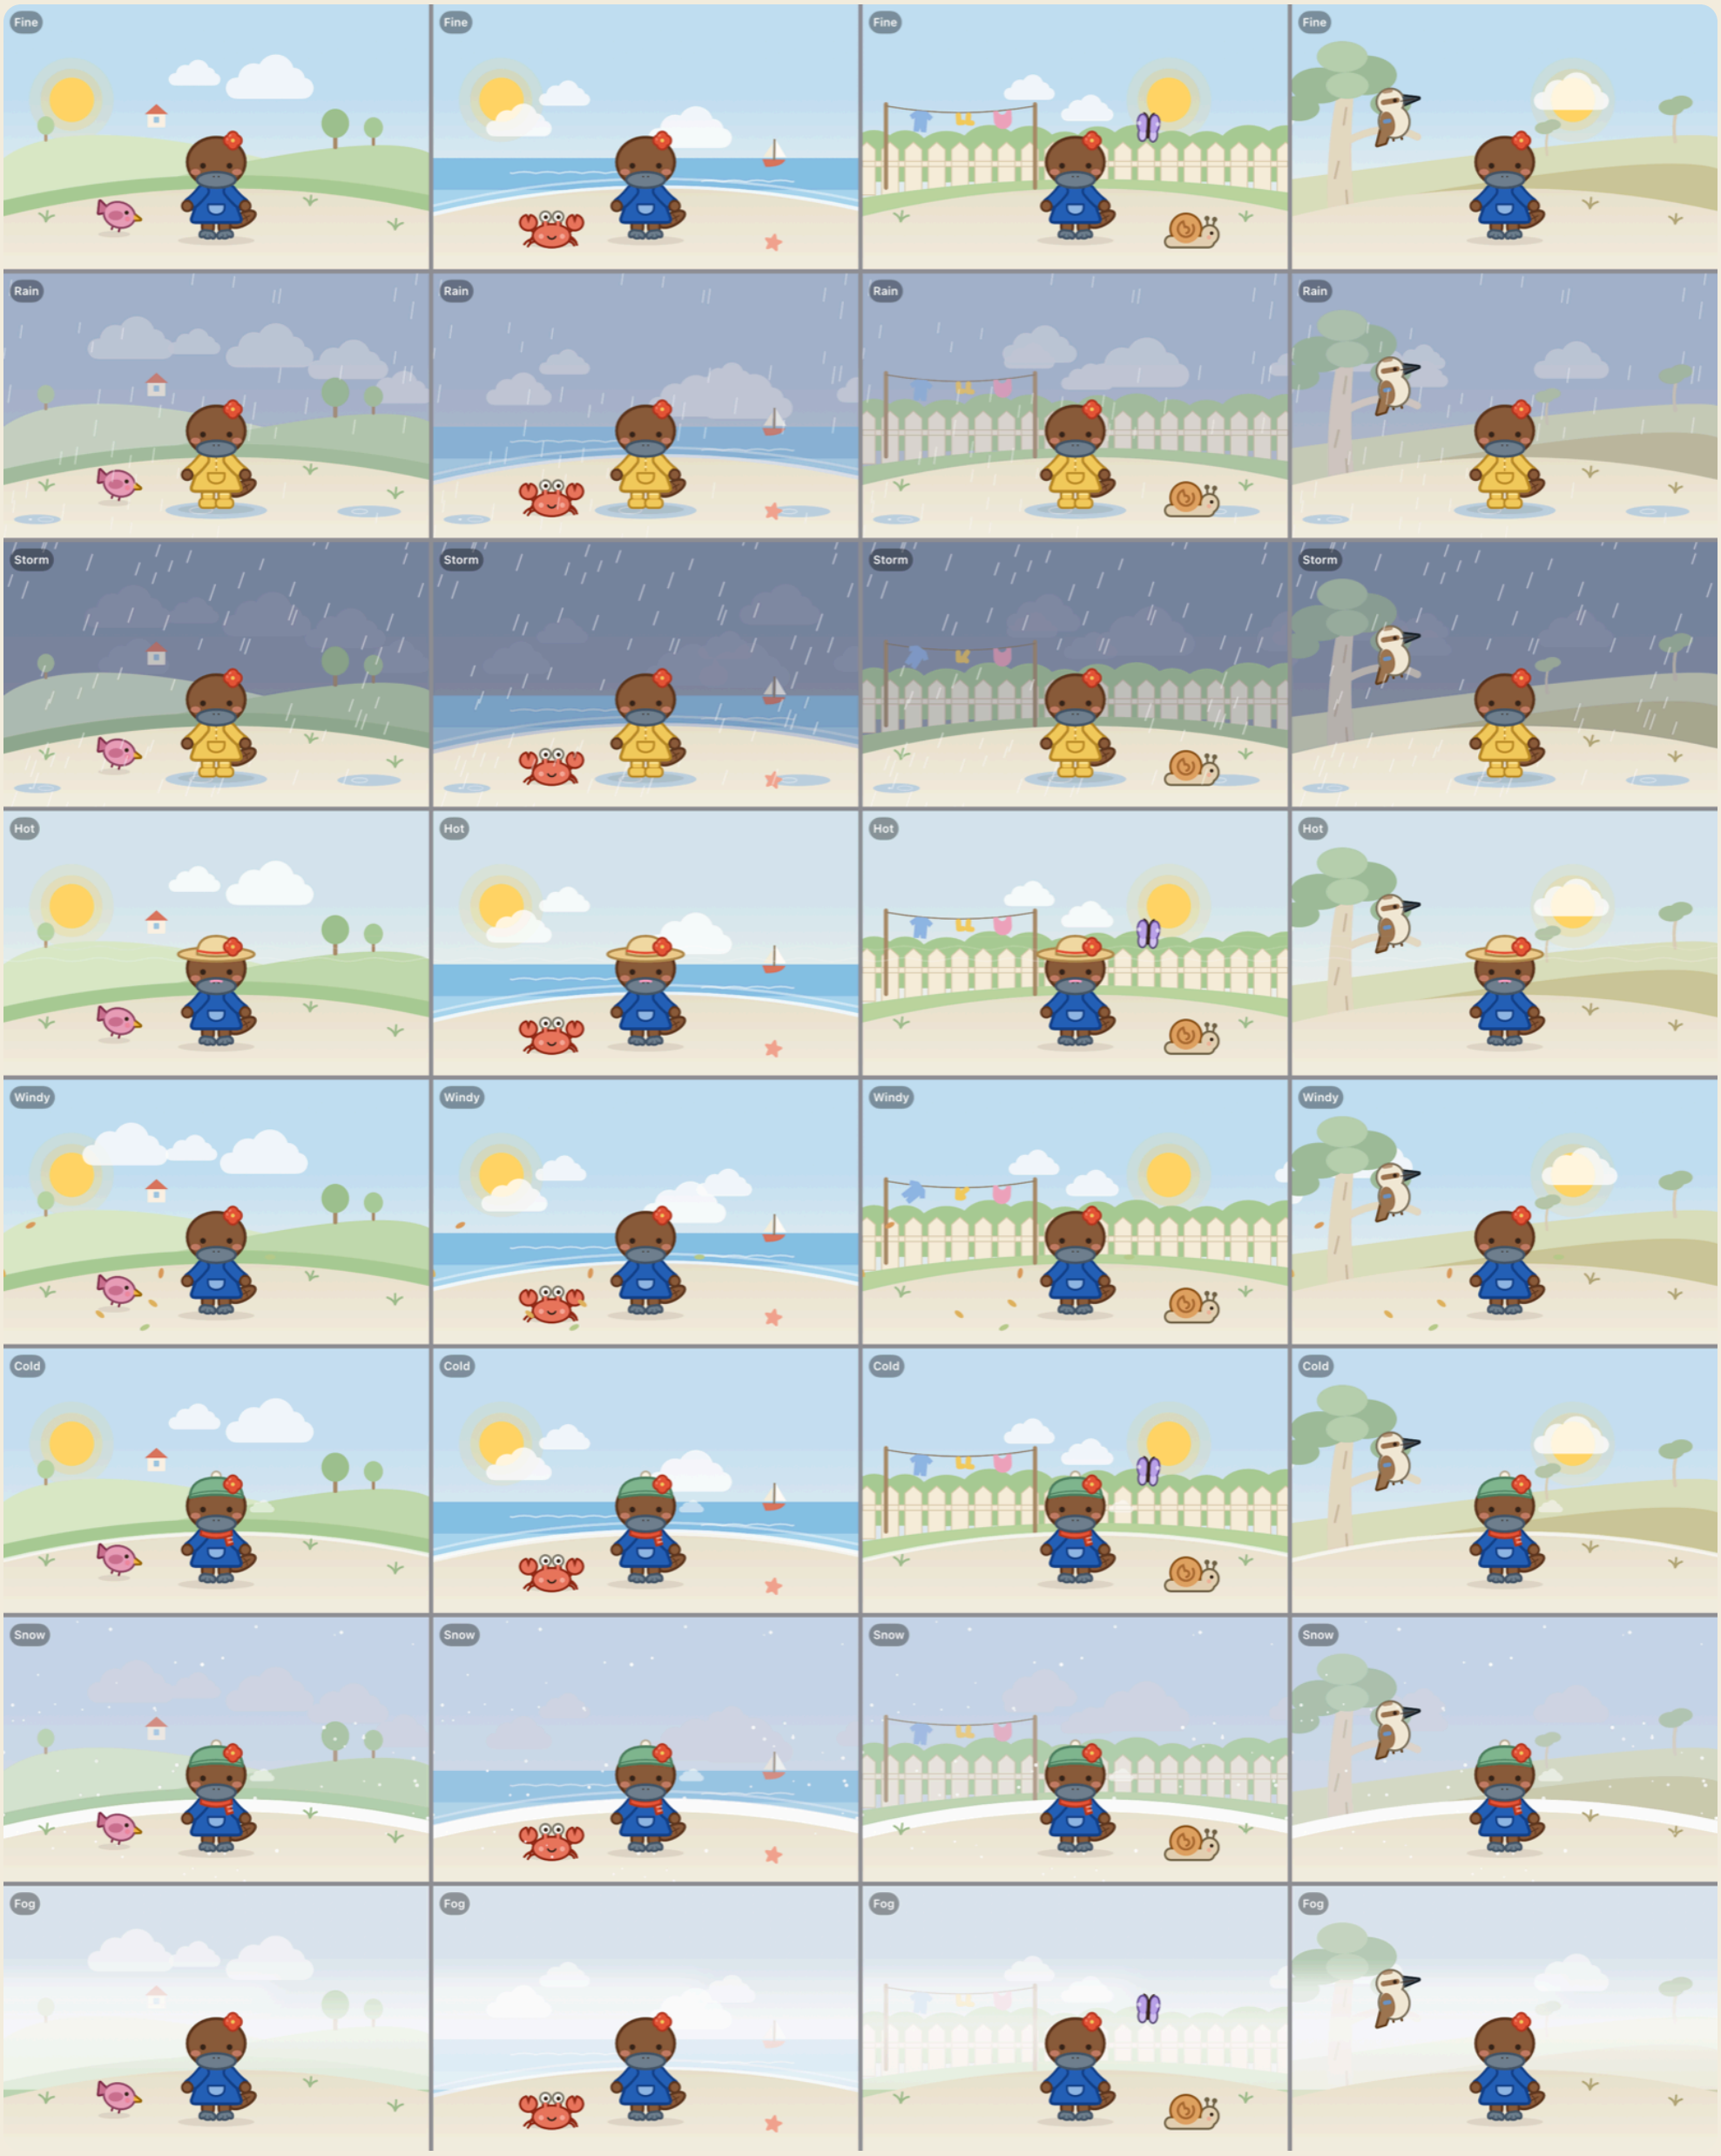

Weather, and what Puggle wears for it

ROUND 10

A gentler break, and the pieces land

You are not overthinking it. Sharp points beside a baby's face read as spiky, and the tallest shards came up level with her cheeks. There are two ways to calm it, shown separately and together.

M1. Shards, as in Z2

Sharp points, some of them tall. This is the one that can look spiky.

M2. The same, with soft tips

Every point rounded off. The pieces are the same sizes; only the sharpness has gone.

M3. Lower and soft

The tall shards cut down by about a third, and the tips rounded. Still uneven, no longer pointed.

M4. Lower, still sharp

The shorter shards with their points left on, to show which of the two changes is doing the work.

My pick is M3. Rounding the tips takes the edge off, and lowering the shards keeps them away from her face. It is still plainly a broken shell, because the pieces stay different sizes. The animation below uses it.

Hatching, third pass

Hatch again

The pieces land	Your idea. The two side pieces are tossed up and out, fall, and come to rest on the ground either side with a small bounce. They lie there for a moment and then fade, so the picture ends as the logo.
The cap settles	The piece on her head hops and tips as she stops, a beat after she does.
Eyes open	They open over a moment where they snapped before, and her cheeks warm as they do.
The shadow	It shifts with the egg as it rocks.
The name	In the lower one, the name slides in beside her once her eyes are open. That is how it would play on the splash screen.

Other things I would try next, in the app's rig: the pieces staying on the ground in the first-run scene, where there is room for them; a soft tap from the phone when the shell cracks; and her looking up at the cap once before she settles.

One thing I would not add is more movement after she opens her eyes. The calm at the end is what makes it feel like this app.

ROUND 9

A break that looks broken, and a better hatch

The saw-tooth came from the edge going up and down in turn, each step about the same. A shell breaks into pieces of different sizes, so the new edge mixes tall shards, short ones and shallow chips.

Z1. V2, as it was

Eight teeth of slightly different sizes. Still a zigzag: up, down, up, down.

Z2. Shards

Thirteen points. Two tall shards, a few short ones and some shallow chips, with no two steps alike. The cap is cut from the middle of the same line.

Z3. Shards and chips

Sixteen points, with more small chips between the shards. Truer to a real shell, and busier.

Z2 at icon sizes

The two smallest keep the simpler eight-step edge, because thirteen points turn to fuzz at 29 points.

Hatching, second pass

Hatch again

What changed from the first pass:

A beat first	The egg sits still, gives one small rock, stops, then rocks harder. The pause is what makes you look.
The crack travels	The break runs across from left to right, then the two hairlines follow. Before, it faded in all at once.
Pieces fall away	The top splits into three. Two pieces tip off to the sides and the middle one stays on her head. Before, the whole top shrank into the cap.
She pushes up	She stretches a little as she rises and settles back, and the shell under her gives and recovers.
Eyes	She comes up with her eyes shut, opens them, and blinks once. Then she is still.
Ground	A soft shadow under the egg, so it sits on something.

About three seconds to the open eyes. Still to try, and better done in the app's rig than here: a soft tap from the phone on the crack, a tilt of her head after the blink, and a sleeping version for night.

Rules

The name	Appears only on the splash screen, the app icon and Help.
Her face	No mouth. The bill never moves or changes. Eyebrows appear only with a feeling: never at rest, never angry, sad or worried.
Her feelings	Eyes, eyebrows, cheeks, floating marks, her body and her tail show them. She is never sad or disappointed about what a parent did or did not log.
Line	Characters are outlined in a darker shade of each part's own colour. The world has no outlines.
Hands	Always visible, clear of the head and body. Peekaboo is the only time they cover the face.
Icons	One drawing, four finishes: line (coloured by activity), sticker, holographic, and print. The slipped colour lives only in print.
Scenes	A small colour key, one big shape, real light and a moment for the cast.
Places and culture	Nothing Indigenous or with strong Indigenous meaning. Generic places only; no Sydney Opera House.
Originality	Solid colours and shapes of our own. References are for study; nothing is copied.
Children	A child's real name never appears in the work.

Still open

- The logo: an exploration is under way in the app's previews (the little sister hatching from an egg).
- Whether logos and the app icon keep the dark line.
- Pebble's name.
- Trade mark checks for the name and logotype.
- The three proposed additions to Puggle (patterned outfit, flat version, side-on walk).
